BALLARD

Ballard is one of Seattle's most sought-after areas, a small, maritime-based neighborhood; tucked away in an inlet on the Pacific coast. The neighborhood has been booming in recent years - known for being a hip waterfront neighborhood with trendy restaurants, shops, bars and craft breweries centered on historic Ballard Avenue. Boasting an almost perfect Walk Score of 98, the location is ideal for a vast array of future residents, with many transit options nearby.

Historically, Ballard is the traditional center of Seattle's Scandinavian seafaring community, who were drawn to the area for its salmon fishing opportunities. In recent years, the proportion of Scandinavian residents have decreased over the years, but the neighborhood is still proud of its heritage. Ballard is home to the National Nordic Museum, which celebrates both the community of Ballard and the local Scandinavian history. Each year the community celebrates the Ballard Seafood Fest and Norwegian Constitution Day.

Ballard's exceptional location is surrounded by water and its rich maritime history has transformed the neighborhood into a diverse recreation destination. Major neighborhood attractions include Fisherman's Terminal and the Ballard Locks, which link the Puget Sound with Lake Union and Lake Washington. Beach fans benefit from Ballard's proximity to Golden Gardens, an 87-acre beach-front park off the Puget Sound. Hailed as one of the most beautiful beaches in the northwest, Golden Gardens offers stunning views of the Puget Sound and Olympic Mountains.

Ballard is a great combination of low-density, quiet leafy streets, high-density living, a bustling Old Town center plus some great outdoor spaces. Restaurant highlights include handcrafted pizza, grilled meats, made-to-order tortillas, Italian classics, and great seafood. The industrial district has become Seattle's hotbed for craft beer, locally known as the Ballard Brewery District. There are among a dozen or so breweries within easy walking distance of one another. On Sundays, Ballard Avenue transforms into Ballard Farmers Market, where vendors sell Washington-made produce and crafts.
